

Arthurian Order of Avalon

The mission of the Arthurian Order of Avalon (AOA) is to educate its membership and audiences in Arthurian ideals, history and culture in order to instill, preserve and promote concepts of Chivalry, Courtesy, and Honor.

The Arthurian Order of Avalon is a not-for-profit organization not affiliated with any religious group and accepts members from all backgrounds, faiths, and personal philosophies. We are an ever growing and diverse group all in pursuit of the same mission and vision.

As an educational organization, one of the primary missions of the Arthurian Order of Avalon is to educate its members and the general public about medieval culture and history. The Scholar's Guild is tasked with directing the scholastic efforts of the AOA's populace. All guild members are instructed in Arthurian lore and encouraged to explore their own research interests.

The Norman Medieval Fair is the AOA's largest performance and education venue. Each year, the AOA provides a variety of educational displays and demonstrations to the public through the Education Tent. The displays range from medieval arms and armor to science to needlework to medieval games and pastimes. These displays allow members to showcase their personal research and share their passion for a subject with others. Members also conduct public demonstrations of skills learned through other guilds and provide a historical context for their work.

In addition to the Medieval Fair, the AOA conducts educational seminars to school and library groups throughout the metro Oklahoma City area. These presentations can be customized to any audience with 3-4 weeks' advance notice. Most demonstrations are performed for free, although we do appreciate an honorarium to cover travel expenses. If you are a local teacher or librarian who would like to incorporate a seminar or demonstration into your curriculum, please contact us for more information.
